

Soros and Gates Partner Up to Buy COVID-19 Test Company

Two of the world's richest men, Bill Gates and George Soros, have partnered up through their respective foundations and global funds to purchase Mologic Ltd., the company that manufactures COVID-19 tests.

Mologic also is a "world leading innovator in the development of lateral flow and rapid diagnostic technologies including tests that can help combat tropical diseases such as dengue, bilharzia, and river blindness," according to a press release from Open Society Foundations. Open Society is a Soros organization.

The collaboration on the Mologic purchase will launch a new group called Global Access Health (GAH), which the press release describes as "a social enterprise that will seek to expand access to affordable state-of-the-art medical technology through decentralized research, development and manufacturing in and for the Global South." Members of GAH will invest $41 million to get the project going.
