

Search for: [input] Search

The Ulsterman Report: Valerie Jarrett and The Muslim Brotherhood

Home » The Ulsterman Report: Valerie Jarrett and The Muslim Brotherhood

Published by Ulsterman February 2011

For most Americans Valerie Jarrett, senior adviser to President Barack Obama, remains largely an unknown. To DC Insiders, she has positioned herself as the true power in the Oval Office - a woman who, like the President, has direct links to the Muslim world, both past - and present.

Weeks after widespread Middle East chaos first erupted, and with a growing number of nations now poised to join the likes of Egypt and Libya into all out rebellion, some are finally questioning the role played by the Obama White House in helping to hasten these events. Of primary concern is the reasoning behind Barack Obama's quick repudiation of Egypt's Mubarak, and near silence regarding Libya's Gaddafi. Why such a disparity in tone between one uprising vs another? As was noted in a previous report, Mubarak, though certainly a dictator of some 30 years in power, was, outside of Israel, America's strongest ally in the Middle East. Gadaffi was instead a 40 year enemy of the United States - a figure engaged in terrorism, and repeated anti-American rhetoric. And yet, within hours of the Egyptian uprising, Obama demanded Mubarak step aside, while days went by during the Libyan uprising, and Obama said nothing.

Perhaps the answer to this disparity can be found with President Obama's closest and most powerful adviser - Valerie Jarrett.

BQI Chat

BQI Chat

Guest_75971, Guest_91461, Guest_64554, Guest_16962

Guest_32902 August 20, 2014 - 3:13 pm

hi

Guest_23683 August 21, 2014 - 5:53 am

It's good to advocate for your political views, but outright lies don't help anyone in this country make informed decisions

Justjking August 21, 2014 - 5:56 am

Websites like this are a sign that our democracy is alive and well, but I have to say that outright lies aren't helping anyone. You can't trick people into becoming conservative because they won't know why they hold that political belief. Get real and stop BSing everyone: factcheck.org/2011/06/secret-service-tattletales/

MitonReed August 23, 2014 - 4:52 am

What you call lies others see as truth. Much depends on your perspective. To establish this web site as lies you must offer facts that refute what has been offered.

Guest_88076 October 24, 2014 - 12:16 am

http://tech-kinodeon.blogspot.com/2014/08/855onlinercom.html

Despite the information being easily accessed, most Americans are likely still unaware that Valerie Jarrett was born in Iran, and spent her first five years in that country. Like Barack Obama, Jarrett's initial experience was not as an American, but an American/Muslim hybrid. According to an American Spectator report in August of 2008, the Obama campaign had initiated an aggressive program to hide Jarrett's Iranian background. This program received significant help from certain media figures who were only too happy to comply with the Obama camp's request that Jarrett's Middle East ties were not made a public matter - even as Iranian.com declared Jarrett its "Iranian of the Day" that same month of August. Also during that same time period, Barack Obama admitted to the New York Times that, "I trust her (Jarrett) to speak for me, particularly when we're dealing with delicate issues" and that he ran every important decision by her first.

Jarrett's family history is rife with radical ties, including those of her father-in-law Vernon Jarrett, a supporter of such communist-American icons of the 1940s as Langston Hughes. Vernon Jarrett was the strongest link to Chicago's Hyde Park environment that would be of such great influence on Valerie Jarrett, and then through her, shape both Barack and Michelle Obama's adult outlook upon American and its place in the world. Again largely ignored by the media in 2008, Chicago's Hyde Park was home to such radical figures as the socialist Arnold Wolf, an anti-Israel rabbi (yes, those do in fact exist) who had pushed for increased support for the terrorist PLO. At around that same time Rabbi Wolf was also deeply involved with the Chicago Communist Party. Mr. Wolf declared in a 2008 Chicago Sun Times interview of other Hyde Park elites' excitement over the political potential of a young Barack Obama a decade earlier, declaring they believed to have found in Obama, "A guy who could sell our product, and sell it with splendor!"

Some of those other Hyde Park leftist elites excited over the prospects of Barack Obama included domestic terrorists turned educators Bill Ayers and Bernardine Dorn, Tony Rezko, (a Syrian-American) Democrat Socialist member Jackie Grimshaw, Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakahn, and yes - Valerie Jarrett, already a central player in the Daley-run Chicago political machine, and prior to that, a member of the Harold Washington mayoral administration. Washington too was deeply involved with what some have described as the Chicago Communist Network. Within just a few short years of having been introduced to these radical Chicago figures, Barack Obama found himself as a newly elected State Senator, an author of a highly publicized book (though his own past showed little evidence of having a proclivity for writing, unlike his close neighbor Bill Ayers) and on an astonishing fast-track to national politics, all the while being guided/programmed by the Iranian-born Valerie Jarrett.

So this brings us to more recent events in the Middle East, and the seemingly contradictory message coming out of the Obama White House regarding uprisings throughout that region - and the influence of the Muslim Brotherhood both on those uprisings, and the muddled response of President Obama.

In Egypt, the Muslim Brotherhood was constantly rebuked by the Mubarak regime - a regime that had for decades helped keep the peace between the Muslim world and Israel. Within hours of an uprising breaking out, President Barack Obama, who admitted every decision he makes is first run by Valerie Jarrett, spoke out against longtime American ally Hosni Mubarak and demanded the longtime Egyptian ruler step aside. It is in Egypt where the Muslim Brotherhood was founded, though since that time it has spread its considerable influence throughout the Muslim world. President Obama's very public stance against Mubarak was in stark contrast to uprisings a year earlier in Iran (the birthplace of Valerie Jarrett) that saw a tepid response from the Obama administration - nary a word was spoken against the Iranian regime, or support given to the cause of the protesters.

Then came Libya, and again, similar to the lack of response President Obama had given to the Iranian uprising of a year earlier, and in stark contrast to the strong response given just a week prior regarding Egypt, Barack Obama said nothing. No words of support. No condemnation of Libya and its 40-year ruler Muammar Gaddafi, a man who had long supported terrorist attacks against America for decades - much like his Iranian counterparts.

iwitness02
December 8, 2014 - 9:12 am

Sound Scroll

Guest_21026 400

Send

Powered by Quick Chat

Recent Tweets

Twitter not configured.

Archives

Select Month

So in essence, the Obama administration's almost immediate response toward Hosni Mubarak, a figure who had been an essential ally to the United States in the always-volatile region of the Middle East, was to demand he relinquish power in favor of the uprising - an uprising largely manufactured by the Muslim Brotherhood. But in the case of Libya, a nation long ruled by an anti-American state-sponsored terrorism madman, the Obama administration remained all but silent - much as it had done with Iran, also a nation that remains a bastion of anti-American terrorist activities. Surely these responses, or lack thereof, were manufactured at least in part by Valerie Jarrett, the figure President Obama admits he seeks approval from regarding all decisions.

Ah, and now the plot thickens even further, for just this week, Kamal al-Halbavi, a senior member of the Muslim Brotherhood gave a statement indicating his organization's strong approval of the Iranian government for its "role in consolidating unity and solidarity among the Muslim countries throughout the world." Al-Halbavi went on to also directly praise the leadership of Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, the very figure who has repeatedly declared the need to destroy Israel, boasted of being able to recruit "hundreds of suicide bombers a day", and the belief that Islam's intent is to "rule the world."

A 2010 New York Times article cited the following regarding the Obama administration's ever increasing involvement with Muslim groups - led of course by Iranian-born Valerie Jarrett: Muslim and Arab-American advocates have participated in policy discussions and received briefings from top White House aides and other officials on health care legislation, foreign policy, the economy, immigration and national security. They have met privately with a senior White House adviser, Valerie Jarrett.

Perhaps it is simple coincidence that the Muslim Brotherhood was given broad support by the Obama administration in its attempts to overthrow longtime American ally Hosni Mubarak in Egypt. And perhaps it is yet more coincidence that the Obama administration then remained largely silent when a similar uprising took place in Iran. And yes, it must be yet more coincidence that at the same time the Iranian-born Jarrett-led Obama administration was giving scant support to the protests in Iran, the Muslim Brotherhood was declaring its continued support for the Iranian regime and its radical anti-American president Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, calling Ahmadinejad, "...the bravest man in the Muslim world." The very man whose government has slaughtered vast numbers of its own people in order to keep them subservient.

But what of Libya you say? President Obama did finally speak out in support of the uprising in Libya, more than a week after those protests began. These statements were read by Barack Obama on February 23rd. Guess what group spoke for the first time in support of the Libyan uprising just a day prior to Obama's own words? The Muslim Brotherhood - they did not give their own official support for the uprising until February 22nd - and only until after that statement from the Muslim Brotherhood came out did Barack Obama personally speak to the issue.

But of course, this is all just more coincidence layered upon more coincidence...right?

Fox Political News

Media swoon: Elizabeth Warren, unlike Ted Cruz, hailed as a principled crusader
December 15, 2014

Washington Times: Obama

EDITORIAL: Hollywood hacking a Sony cyberattack horror story
December 14, 2014

Sean Hannity News

Joel Rosenberg's Blog

What's it like to live in Israel? What does 2015 hold? Listen to year-end interview I did with Moody Radio.
December 10, 2014

14 Unique Visitors
4
Powered By Google Analytics

Glenn Beck.Com

Top Glenn of 2010!
December 30, 2010

The Daily Beck Blog

Prophecy News
US borrowing crisis days away from danger, says World Bank head
October 14, 2013

The Jerusalem Post

BQI's Newest Addition.
Meet our new mascot, BQ. Feed him and make sure he gets his exercise. Create food by tapping on your touch screen. Point cursor to where you want him to go. Tap circle in the wheel and he runs.

Links

- American Thinker
- Blasted Fools
- Fox News - Politics
- Front Lines
- Human Events
- Jewish Institute for National Security Affairs
- Jihad Watch
- Kevin Webb 22
- Michelle Malkin
- Prophecy News Watch
- RenewAmerica
- Rush Limbaugh
- Sean Hannity
- The American Spectator
- The Daily Rant
- The Green Agenda
- Townhall.com
- World Net Daily
- World of NewsNINJA2012

ARTICLES

* JINSA Condemns Obama Administration's Castigation of Israel

Copyright © 2010 - Black Quill and Ink FAIR USE NOTICE: For all videos and anything used on this site: "Information, including content and videos, contained in this blog or on my Facebook site may contain copyrighted material. Such material is made available for educational purposes, to advance understanding of human rights, democracy, scientific, moral, ethical, and social justice issues, etc. This constitutes a 'fair use' of any such copyrighted material as provided for in Title 17 U.S.C. section 107 of the US Copyright Law. This material is distributed without profit. . The views and opinions expressed here are those of the author and in no way reflect the opinions or views of BQI or its management. Where controversial views are expressed they may be allowed to remain on this site as a means to gain knowledge on a particular subject matter.